TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 23

A REPOY TALKING IN THE STREET - The following is an extract from a letter received by the last London mail from a gentleman in Mh. w. giving an account of a tragic occurrence there. Mh. was a military establishment in Central India under the Bombay command:

January 19 - There was a most sad occurrence at Mh. yesterday. A repoy ran amok and shot 14 persons. The repoy was late for parade, and was ordered to dress in uniform to his barracks by the sergeant of the regiment. This seems to be the cause of his madness. At the parade he went to the subadar and said he wanted to see Colonel Henslowe, the commanding officer, as he had been ordered for nothing. The subadar said: 'Tomorrow morning will do in the orderly room.' The repoy said nothing more, went to his hut, took his rifle and pouch, and it is surmised, said something of his intentions to his wife, for the reason after him. He hurried and shot her and her child. He then went to the canteen main street and at random fired down it, shooting the arm of a repoy. The arm had to be amputated at the elbow. Colonel Henslowe, who is about 200 yards from the Native Infantry lines, heard the firing, went out, saw the state of matters, walked from the back of the house to the guard a quarter of a mile, took a rifle and cartridge from one of the sergeants and tried to talk the man who was firing at every one he saw. When Colonel Henslowe got within 150 yards of the man he stepped out of cover of the hut; he was behind and raised his rifle to shoot the repoy. The man, however, was too quick for him; he took a snap shot at Colonel Henslowe and dropped him with a bullet in his hip. Colonel Henslowe lingered for about twelve hours. The woman died at five in the evening. The child and the wounded repoy live and are likely to recover. As Colonel Henslowe will be buried and his shot ordered to be stopped, the killing is most likely. - St. James Gazette, February 16
